Akamas is an online training provider for the wider children's workforce, specialising in professional development for those people working with vulnerable and traumatised children and young people.

Delivery, assessment and communication is carried out via online technology using the user friendly, easy to navigate Akamas website. Mapped to students in Education, Foster Care and Children's Workforce courses, the system simply requires a user name and password which enables access to all course material and online support.

The online training programmes are designed to be highly flexible, ensuring that continued development is accessible to all at the same time as accommodating individual needs.

The Executive Directors, Associate Trainers and Tutors of Akamas work from various UK locations but are linked online through technologies supported by video conferencing, messaging and e-mail.

The tailored, Edexcel accredited level 3 and 4 BTEC qualifications produce online automated certificates and interim reports so that progress can be detailed at any stage. Support is available for students via the online handbook, from tutors or the support team either by direct correspondence or the online message board facility available within the user area. The online assessment is carried out either through tutors or by multi choice questions.

The UK wide customer base demonstrates the virtual nature of Akamas.
